Implementation Process:

Out of the Dark uses CSR to engage and motivate young people from disadvantaged backgrounds and rehabilitate them back into society by retraining, providing skills that are used to produce and market furniture

Initiated practices:

Results:

This is a new concept and results in social responsible advances and produces a desirable product that is sold through select London retailers and as the SME at trade fairs

Recommendations:

This model of CSR is a novel method for providing skills and expanding the available workforce population. The company is enjoying success and is continuously seeking new avenues to increase its quality outputs and experience for its employees

Conclusions:

This small enterprise creates a family atmosphere caring and training its workforce maintaining lost skills and reinvigorating the furniture industry work force. It demonstrates strong social responsibility taking unemployed from disadvantaged backgrounds and motivating them to become contributing citizens.
